As you enjoy the first day of spring, be sure to grab your doggie bags when you leave for a walk! Pet waste is high in nitrogen and phosphorous (as well as bacteria). When you leave it behind on walks or in your yard, it can runoff into our waterways. This can lead to the growth of algae blooms, eutrophication, and fish kills. Many people think that because wildlife poop in the park then it is okay for their dog to poop in the park as well. This is NOT true! Wildlife consumes resources and nutrients from their ecosystem and their waste returns the same resources and nutrients to that environment. Commercial dog food and a dog's digestive system are different. Leaving these foreign nutrients in nature pollutes the ecosystem!
